Rose Disease Control Tried in Texas

A novel treatment with material, not a spray formulation containing mineral, has given better results in tests with roses than any other treatments so far tried, according to the Texas Rose Research Foundation.

The news is passed along by S. J. Ferris, plant pathologist at Texas A. & M. College, who reports that the material is a powder containing sulphur and compounds with other fungicidal properties that were used over a period of three years in comparison with other treatments.

In the tests, an application of sulphur-copper dust was used every seven days during the growing season, and in the summer during hot weather in the middle of the summer there was a change to a sulphur-zinc dust and wettable materials. The results showed that the sulphur-copper dust was the best of the three materials and compared with other fungicidal materials tested. The dust material at the rate of 5 pounds per 50 gallons of water.

Treated and untreated bushes were randomly chosen in the tests, weighed in order to determine the differences in growth. Those bushes receiving the sulphur-copper dust produced 147.5 times as much growth as those not receiving any treatment. Those bushes receiving the sulphur-zinc dust produced 135.5 times as much growth as those not receiving any treatment.

Ferris says growers contacting him have better results with this material than with any other treatment.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

Can we tell anything from the appearance of the sky as to what is going to come of the weather?

Yes. The rainbow, of course, means rain, but it is also often seen when there are no clouds in the sky. Sometimes it may be the possibility of rain, but probably what form a rainbow may take depends on the weather.

If you see a rainbow in the morning, expect rain in the afternoon. If you see a rainbow in the afternoon, expect rain in the morning. If you see a rainbow in the middle of the day, expect rain in the afternoon.

Among warning signs of changeable weather are the following:

Sun rises dull and hazy.

Sun rises with a greenish tint.

Sun rises with a reddish tint.

Sun rises with a yellowish tint.

Sun rises with a bluish tint.

Sun rises with a purplish tint.

Sun rises with a pinkish tint.

OF INTEREST TO VETERANS

A. C. Clement, Area Director, Department of War Veterans Claims, 1113 Church Street, Lynchburg, has issued the following statement of interest to veterans.

Based upon one of my articles and letters relating to veterans, I said that I had been government life insurance paid to beneficiaries to whom I was satisfied that the veteran had no intention of leaving his insurance. Veterans Administration recently stated that the increasing number of cases are coming to their attention wherein premiums have to be paid to other than the veteran's immediate family because the veteran failed to keep his beneficiary information up to date.

The cases now showing up are where a husband and wife have died and in each case the same beneficiary has been carried over the policies years and years. Where children had grown and married, the VA is required by law to pay the insurance proceeds to the beneficiary in the order of precedence established by the insurance contract. Where the insured has failed to designate any beneficiary in any way that could be identified, the VA is required by law to pay the proceeds to the widow of the insured, if there is one living, and if not, to the children of the insured, if there are any. If there are no children, then to the parents of the insured, if they are living, and if not, to the estate of the insured. In all cases where the VA is required by law to pay the proceeds to the widow, children, parents or estate of the insured, it is necessary that the beneficiary in any way that could be identified, the VA is required by law to pay the proceeds to the widow of the insured, if there is one living, and if not, to the children of the insured, if there are any. If there are no children, then to the parents of the insured, if they are living, and if not, to the estate of the insured. In all cases where the VA is required by law to pay the proceeds to the widow of the insured, if there is one living, and if not, to the children of the insured, if there are any. If there are no children, then to the parents of the insured, if they are living, and if not, to the estate of the insured.

Veterans who have changed their addresses should notify the VA of the change of beneficiaries, but in some time with her mother, Mrs. C. A. Moore, who continues her home.

Virginia Farmers Produce Less Pork Than Could Be Used

Virginia farmers are producing more pork and lard than is used in the state, according to swine specialists at VPI. Last year, they point out, Virginia farmers produced 240,000,000 pounds of pork each year, while 303,000,000 pounds is the amount needed to feed the state's population. Virginia has many systems of feeding swine, including partially ... feeding, gleaning fields, ... cattle, pasture feeding, ... feeding.

Who'll Get the Coffee?

Amsterdam, Holland.- The secretary who is merely adept at shorthand and typing will soon be obsolete, according to an inventor who is working on an "electrical secretary" that will be ready for mass production within three years. The inventor claims "The machine will silently, obediently, and efficiently take a letter, type it, and address the envelope without stopping to powder its nose, light a cigarette, or go out for a cup of coffee."

Latest reports are that business executives from all over the world have expressed enthusiasm for the new invention. The secretaries? They're not so sure.
